

Contents

Preface	13
Part I. Human Rights as Standards – The Abstract Idea	17
1. Human Rights and the Ethics of International Relations	19
1.1. Human Rights as Standards of Legitimacy	21
1.2. The Normative Substance of Human Rights Standards	26
1.3. Human Rights Standards and International Institutions	32
1.4. Human Rights as “Universal” Standards: A Few Arguments Against Relativism	35
1.4.1. Substantive Relativism	37
1.4.2. Metaethical Relativism	39
2. The Limits of Statism and the Normative Significance of Political Associations	43
2.1. Methodological Statism . The Limits of a Theoretical Paradigm	45
2.2. The Ethical Status of Political Associations	49
2.3. States as Legal Persons and the Assignment of Collective Responsibilities	54
2.3.1. The Argument from Methodological Individualism	56
2.3.2. The Argument from Moral Agency	59
3. Two Types of Normative Political Theory	67
3.1. General Norms and Principles for Action	68
3.2. Challenges for Normative Agency and the Structure of Theoretical Argument	71
Part II. Human Rights in Contexts	75
4. Peace Ethics	77
4.1. Contemporary Challenges and Theoretical Options: An Overview	78
4.1.1. Challenges	78
4.1.2. Theoretical Options	81
4.1.3. Ethical Argument and Practical Conditions of Application	83

4.2.	Beyond Just-war Theory	84
4.3.	The Legalist Paradigm and the Limits of Normative Institutionalism in Peace Ethics	91
4.3.1.	Walzer's "Deontological" Proposal: Self-defense as Collective Self-determination	91
4.3.2.	The Challenge for "Deontology"	95
4.4.	Collective Security	102
4.4.1.	The Basic Idea	102
4.4.2.	Practical Approximations	105
4.5.	Democratic-peace Theory	106
4.6.	Theoretical Perspectives for a Changing Practice	109
5.	Humanitarian Intervention: An Institutional Perspective	113
5.1.	The Structure of Moral and Legal Discourse of Humanitarian Intervention	114
5.2.	The Permissibility of Humanitarian Intervention. The Legal Debate	119
5.2.1.	Humanitarian Intervention in Legal Argument	121
5.2.2.	Theoretical Perspectives on "Legal Validity"	127
5.3.	Transnational Responsibilities to Protect Human Rights. The Ethical Debate	134
5.3.1.	The Individual Rights Approach	134
5.3.2.	Humanitarian Intervention as the Collective Responsibility to Promote Just Institutions	136
6.	Human Rights and Poverty Relief	145
6.1.	Some Deficiencies of the Present State of the Debate	147
6.2.	Human Rights Standards and the Normative Status of Institutional Goals	149
6.2.1.	The "Negative Rights" Argument	150
6.2.2.	The Separation of Powers Argument	152
6.2.3.	The Institutional Perspective: Legitimacy and Political Goals	152
6.3.	Separating Human-rights Requirements from Requirements of Political Justice	154
6.4.	Socioeconomic Human-rights Requirements Beyond the Nation-state	156
6.4.1.	Extreme Poverty and the Right to Subsistence	156
6.4.2.	International Trade	163
6.5.	Objections to Cosmopolitanism	168
6.5.1.	The Methodological Level	168
6.5.2.	The Analytical Level	169
6.5.3.	The Practical Level	170

7.	Transnational Migration	171
7.1.	Human Rights Standards and Voluntary Migration	173
7.1.1.	The Holistic Structure of Political Society	174
7.1.2.	The Limits of Social Constructivism	177
7.2.	Justified Interests of Political Societies and Individual Persons	181
7.3.	A Critique of Some Common Arguments of the Current Debate	183
7.3.1.	“Freedom of Association:” The Libertarian Approach	184
7.3.2.	“Freedom of Movement:” The Egalitarian Approach	185
7.3.3.	Communitarian Ideals of Membership and the “Argument from Culture”	187
7.4.	Involuntary Migration	190
7.5.	Are We Moving towards Cosmopolitan Society? – A Very Short Afterword	192
	A Final Remark	193
	Bibliography	195
	Index of Names	207

